At the most basic level, men's rights are the legal rights that are granted to men. However, any issue that pertains to men's relationship to society is also a topic suitable for this subreddit. Men's rights are influenced by the way men are perceived by others.

Teachers mark girls higher for IDENTICAL work to boys (OECD study).
Furthermore, a boy will receive 1/3 higher grade in reading tests if the teacher does not know he is a boy (OECD) From kindergarten 1 of early years education they also grade boys lower despite them objectively getting higher test scores Edu./Occu.

Previous submission got deleted by mod eventually so reposting here... still check it out as many excellent comments from men and women about their experience of this bias... many pointed out very obvious misandric comments from their teachers, some teachers even commented about their biases:

This is an unpopular fact as it is widely held in society that women and girls are discriminated against in education and in work, indeed in everything in life.

Note: below is general statement, countless awesome teachers but....

sexism has been persisting for quite a while, now.

I actually posted my story here before but when I was in high school, myself and the other males in my school were forced to sit and listen to a speaker from a women's shelter. She held no punches when she told us that if our dads were abusers, that we would turn out to be abusers. No percentages, no data, just a simple belief that she was attempting to let us in on.

My dad was an abuser. NOT. The scorn, shame and anger I felt from that seminar still Reminds me of this comment I saw on a Reddit post about a man committing rape against some woman outside of a nightclub one time. The comment was like 'It is sad we humans as a species are still prone to these animalistic instincts'.

It was just like ... I'm sorry, what the fuck are you talking about, "we"?

Netherlands Will Promote Shared Parenting Progress

The Netherlands will give automatic parental authority to unmarried couples equally. Giving both parents equal timing with their kids, as long as they recognize themselves as parents/guardians. This law will promote shared parenting.

MRA wouldn't even need to exist if "gender equality" actually meant gender equality and we considered both sides when reviewing issues... sadly it doesn't so MRA is very much needed. Despite below stats only 8% sex specific scholarships are male (2.5 million more women/year go to college) Discrimination

Nothing to see here demonstrates choice in action. Who needs male educators anyway!

Deeply problematic demonstration of innate systematic sexism. Special programs needed to eradicate this horrible injustice!

As a woman, an auntie, a daughter, a partner and a feminist, I find this sub refreshing and wonderful. General bullshit I'd expect from the idea of "man" in this day and age.

But you all (or most of you, anyway) have pleasantly surprised me. I shouldn't actually be surprised though, as you reflect the ideas and concerns of most of the men and boys in my life that I love and care for.

As a woman, I have been a victim of rape and sexual harassment. I have seen and experienced the power that some men have, and have been controlled by it. But at the same time, I understand the unfair pressure that has been put on boys and men in our current society.

You cannot show emotion. You have to be tough. You have to be the bread winner. You are the ones we look to in times of fear. We rely on you for support and protection. You are expected to sacrifice

Was this sexist ? Discrimination

I am doing my masters in psych so my class is dominated by females. And we were having a discussion where a girl was saying how people in the past had better lives. I said I don't agree with her viewpoints and I presented my points for why I think so. I talked about various issues such as wars and medical science not so developed. And she said that I don't agree with her and I am arguing because of my 'male ego'. I didn't know what it meant at the time and had to Google it. Should I consider it sexist ?

'One mum called me and said her child had phoned her and asked whether it was still ok to be a boy and like rugby and rock music.' Social Issues

The organisation, which carries out talks in hundreds of schools, aims to challenge 'toxic masculinity' - the concept that society requires men to act in particular ways that are harmful to themselves and others.

However, parents raised concern about the content of some of its sessions.

The unnamed mother who spoke on condition of anonymity said: 'One mum called me and said her child had phoned her and asked whether it was still ok to be a boy and like rugby and rock music.'

Another parent said that in one workshop young boys were asked to role play 'coming out as straight', which one parent claimed left some pupils approaching their teachers in distress.

During the session, it is claimed: 'The younger boys were told to place a cushion under their jumper and

Sadly this isnt a troll we can ignore: she has 90 awards; is a professor, multiple book and paper author, advises governments & organisations on sexual assault & created first ever national study on rape, invented term "date rape", invented 1 in 4 rape stat... this is not a fringe figure. Feminism

"Although consideration of male victims is within the scope of the legal statutes, it is important to restrict the term rape to instances where male victims were penetrated by offenders. It is inappropriate to consider as a means of rape a man who has had unwanted sexual intercourse with a woman."

"If you look at this group of men who identify themselves as rape victims raped by women ... their shame is not similar to women, their level of injury is not similar to women and their penetration experience is not similar to what women are reporting."<sup>2</sup>

"What would I call [a man being drugged and waking up with a woman on top of him, with his penis inserted inside her vagina]? I would call it 'unwanted contact'."<sup>2</sup> ~ Mary P. Koss

Mary P. Koss is one of the most prominent feminist researchers in the field of sexual violence. Her "1 in 4 college women will be raped" paper is arguably the best known sexual violence study ever conducted in the United States. She is frequently cited by government agencies and has served as an expert adviser to the CDC regarding sexual violence.
